355th MDG reorganization improves services

Tech. Sgt. B. Coors-Davidson

Airman 1st Class Tara McCargo, 355th Medical Operations Squadron Silver Panel medic, checks the vital signs on two-year-old Dakota, son of Staff Sgts. Sonya and Jamie Mageau. Silver Panel one and two were merged as part of a 355th Medical Group reorganization to improve patient care.

By 2nd Lt. Sharon F. Ehasz
355th Wing Public Affairs

The 355th Medical Group recently re-organized the structure of their clinic's Primary Care Manager by Name program. The goal of PCMBN is to improve the continuity of care and patient/provider/team satisfaction. This reorganization is designed to further achieve this goal.

Historically, the Air Force Medical Service has been reactionary. Starting in theory around 1993 and being put into practice in 2000, the PCMBN took deliberate steps to change health care from a reactive to a proactive approach. This move caused military health care to become preventative in trying to keep people healthy rather than helping them once they were sick.

With this change to a proactive health care, a new structure was instated. The PCMBN program allows people to keep the same Primary Care Provider as long as they, and the provider, are at D-M.

"This program allows the providers and their support staff to know their patients and the patients to know the providers," said Capt. Matt Hansen, 355th Medical Operations Squadron Group Practice Manager.

By ensuring a patient sees their Primary Care Provider or another provider in their panel if their Primary Care Provider is unavailable, "a patient does not have to continually explain to different providers their medical situation and medications," said 1st Lt. John Altevers, 355th MDOS Group Practice Manager.

Similar to the recent structure of Blue, Copper, Silver 1 and Silver 2 panels, the re-organized Primary Care Manager by Name program includes all of the previous panels except Silver 2.

2002 ACC Heritage Conference

The Air Combat Command Heritage Conference is March 2 and 3 at D-M.

The conference was created in cooperation with the International Council of Airshows in 1997 to celebrate the Air Force's 50th anniversary. It allows the public to view vintage warbirds flying alongside modern fighter aircraft. The flying members are civilian pilots approved by ACC to fly with ACC Demonstration Team aircraft throughout the United States and Canada at airshows from March through November.

The conference also provides an opportunity for D-M members and their families to see flying operations and witness Air Force history. A viewing area will be set up for D-M members.

For more information, visit: www2.acc.af.mil/airdemo.

Watching where you smoke

Health Concern: I had to walk through the cigarette smoke of four people before entering the library recently. They were standing within six to eight feet of the entrance. Isn't there some sort of policy about smoking within a certain distance of an entrance to a building?

Response: We clarified the base smoking policy with the library staff. The staff will ensure that patrons know that the smoking area is on the east side of the library and will monitor the front entrance to ensure patrons are not smoking by the front door. If caught, patrons will be asked to extinguish their cigarettes or move to the smoking area.

Thank you again for your concern. If you have any further questions or concerns, please contact the library manager, Ms. Pipei Guo, at 228-4381.

CDC waiting list priority

Concern: My husband and I are active duty military and we just recently arrived here from another base.

At our last assignment, they allowed for priority placement for our child at the Child Development Center. Air Force Instructions authorizes the commander to give priority to dual military families. Why is that not authorized here?

Response: The CDC currently has a waiting list of 250 children, primarily belonging to dual military, single military families or active duty with full-time working spouses.

The waiting list is on a first-come, first-serve basis with all active duty members having priority. To change the priority with such a large waiting list would displace many families who have been waiting for over a year for a space in the Center.

We currently have a capacity of 148 children. A new CDC with a capacity of 300 children will start construction this coming summer or fall. With the new center, a new waiting list policy will be developed to prioritize dual and single military families first.

Families may also use Family Child Care providers who are licensed and fully trained. This care is provided in on-base housing.

Stop, in the name of... safety!

Concern: On Mustang and Lightning, there is a 4-way intersection. There is a yield sign on Lightning and there is absolutely nothing on Mustang. I really would like to see something done about making that a 4-way stop.

Response: We've looked into your concern about this intersection. It does not meet the minimum requirements for a 4-way stop based upon the following requirements:

1. the intersection's vehicular volume per hour;
2. the current posted speed limit in the area;
3. the number of "right-angle" accidents at this intersection per year.

Security Forces will continue to patrol this area on a regular basis and will more strictly enforce the speed limits in all housing areas. Once motorists realize that the speed limit on base is being strictly enforced, the safety of the entire Davis-Monthan community will be enhanced.

Davis-Monthan Unit Public Affairs Representatives

Unit Public Affairs Representatives are the "eyes and ears" of the 355th Wing Public Affairs office. Each squadron has unique individuals that have interesting stories to tell, whether it is about sports, awards, lifesaving acts, IDEA program contributions, etc.

Stories also include units making improvements to the methods or processes that they use or to squadron facilities or community areas via self help projects. UPARs are responsible for getting the information to PA in a usable format and in a timely manner.

The PA staff focuses on issues that effect the base populace in general and UPARs judge the input for newsworthiness or unique human interest appeal before forwarding it to the PA staff.

Public Affairs utilizes UPARs to better tell a squadron's story. UPAR responsibilities include:

- ◆ Provide news ideas as well as write and shoot photos of squadron activities for submission to the base newspaper;
- ◆ Review and solicit Hometown News Release submissions;
- ◆ Review squadron submissions to the base marquee and Commander's Access Channell (COX Communications Channel 75)
- ◆ Seek volunteers for tours and speaking engagements

Chapel programs provide hope, healing

By 1st Lt. Chrissy Cuttita

355th Wing Public Affairs

The Divorce Care Workshop offered Thursdays from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. at Desert Dove Chapel may seem like a program that is opposite of their well-advertised Marriage Builders, but the two can work together as an opportunity for hope for people.

Research shows most people who get divorced will remarry. Even if they don't, the program is beneficial to understanding what happened during the divorce process so mistakes are not repeated.

"It's no different than going to the doctor for an illness," said Chaplain (Capt.) John VanderKaay, 355th Wing chaplain.

Those who are divorced and those beginning to deal with the strenuous divorce process can go to the chapel for the opportunity to create solutions in coping with their situation and to learn how they can live with it.

"This is an opportunity for healing and understanding, building optimism and hope for the future," VanderKaay said. "It is a support group in the sense that it brings people of similar situations together who can help each other grow and learn."

The workshop is not to be misunderstood as a place for people to "hook up" with other new singles because it is a known fact that divorce can put people in vulnerable positions, he added.

For some, participating in the program requires overcoming the stigma that a person getting a divorce will be perceived as a failure. Being optimistic and hopeful about the situation is the goal at Divorce Care, just as it is for Marriage Builders.

"Yes it is true, God did say 'don't get divorced' but we are not here to preach," said Chuck Foote, Divorce Care Workshop coordinator. "No one is going to get talked down to, and it is an interdenominational workshop."

The Divorce Care workbook and video series is Christian-based, but coordinators assure participants that they are not there to convert anyone.

Each of the 13 sessions starts with a video for that day's topic. Topics range from feelings that surround divorce, new relationships, financial survival, helping kids cope, to forgiveness.

These topics are similar to those found in Marriage Builders. Divorce Care involves the individual outlook on those topics in the ending marriage relationship to review and renew the personal expectations needed for future relationships.

Interactive discussions on topics allow time for participants to become part of a small support group. Participants choose to share information with others in the effort to create family with the group, to help others with the healing process and to seek help with a participant's own concerns and problems.

In between sessions there is time for personal reflection, study and spiritual growth.

The workbook has guidelines offering some good homework type reflections on the day's topic simply called "on your own material".

The chapel has set aside the time for classes on Thursdays until April but times are flexible, participants can arrive late or leave early as needed. It is geared to meet the needs of the individual.

For more information on Divorce Care, call 228-5411.

Valentine's Day Stories

Reservist accomplishes mission wherever needed

By Karen Halstead
355th Services Squadron

Three days after the World Trade Center Towers were attacked, the 927th Services Squadron at Selfridge Air National Guard Base, Mich., was notified of their initial manning requirements to support operations. The requirement was three; the number later grew to 10 to support Operation Enduring Freedom.

Two of the reservists came to Davis-Monthan early in November to work in the 355th Services Squadron food service operation, when more than 42 percent of their members had also been tasked to support deployed operations.

When D-M's runway was closed for resurfacing in November and December, the dining facility staffed a field food service operation at the Tucson International Airport for D-M members who worked A-10 flight operations there.

Master Sgt. James Candler, who was one of the two reservists, left Selfridge Sept. 14 for Moron Air Base, Spain, but eventually ended up at D-M. Shortly after arriving, he was asked to take over the food service operation at TIA.

"I didn't know what TIA stood for, then I found out," Candler said. "This is the first time ever, I've seen a runway closed and operations moved to a civilian field."

Everyday during the runway closure, four food services members packed meals in specially-insulated containers for transport to TIA. They used a vacant overhang area as the serving line.

Air Force Reservist Master Sgt. James Candler from the 927th Services Squadron at Selfridge Air National Guard Base, Mich., assists Xavier Brown, 355th Services Squadron Food Services cook, prepare a meal at the Desert Inn Dining Facility. Candler supervised field food service operations at the Tucson International Airport for D-M members during recent runway repairs here that moved operations to TIA.

"This was an excellent learning experience," the 15-year veteran reservist said. "Overall, this operation provided good training for the young airmen who worked the TIA operation."

"Although it was similar to the field environment by the way it was set up, it wasn't under true field conditions," he said.

"Thanks to all the flight line personnel who assisted us," he said. "The food services operation at TIA wouldn't have been as successful as it was without their help."

The dining facility serves on the average more than 25,000 meals each month.

The TIA operation served an additional 1,300 meals.

Gen. Hal Hornburg, ACC commander, says that his focus is on sustaining and maintaining ready forces, but an effort to retain people must come first.

By Erin Zagursky
Air Combat Command Public Affairs

Gen. Hal Hornburg's vision for Air Combat Command includes sustaining and maintaining ready forces, but he says an effort to retain people must come first. "If we don't have retention, we won't have readiness. We can have all the transformation, recapitalization and [other] 'ations' that we want, but if we don't keep our

COMACC's vision: one for the people

people with us, then our readiness rates will suffer," said Hornburg, commander of ACC, in a Jan. 28 interview. "Our number one thing is people — that means to me, retention and people programs."

Hornburg hopes the military pay raises of recent years and improved family programs will encourage airmen to stay in the service. He also believes leadership-guided career support will contribute to retention.

"As senior people, we need to be coaches, leaders, and mentors for our young people," Hornburg said. "We need to let them know what we did to get where we are to help them climb that ladder as best they can. We probably don't do that as well as we need to, and we need to get back to it."

Before assuming command of ACC in November 2001, Hornburg commanded Air Education and Training Command. His time there taught him that education and training should not be taken for granted. AETC supports ACC by preparing airmen to do their jobs, and "we complement them" by providing experienced people to serve as trainers, said Hornburg.

"It's up to me and the other commanders outside the training command to take our best people and send them back as trainers because you only get what you pay for," he said.

The commander is proud of the work that ACC forces have done in support of Operations Enduring Freedom and Noble Eagle. "I can't believe how much they're doing and how well they're doing it," said Hornburg.

"I'm so proud of the fact that I'm not hearing, 'When's this going to be over?' Right now people are saying, 'It will be over when it's over.' The president called us to do a job, and we're going to do it until it's over."

Hornburg is excited about ACC's future. People programs are getting better and initiatives like the F-22 and the Global Strike Task Force are on the horizon. "The Global Strike Task Force is going to be a reality because we're going to be in charge of it," he said. "ACC people are going to be right in the middle of the Global Strike Task Force, which we need desperately if we are going to maintain the best, most vibrant Air Force in the world and have that 'kick down the door' force. That's what Global Strike Task Force is all about."

If he had the chance to start over as a lieutenant today, Hornburg says, "I'd do it — if I could take my wife back with me. I would certainly love to be able to do the things that the lieutenants and captains of today will be able to do in the future. My next assignment's going to be the old airmen's home, but there are a lot of young people who have a wonderful career ahead of them and great career opportunities. — I'd do it in a heartbeat."

Panels

The Silver 2 panel merged with the other three panels. This occurred in light of anticipated summer Permanent Change of Station moves.

"We reorganized our primary care panels to better serve our customers' needs and to prepare for the move into the new facility this summer," Altevers said.

Members of Silver 2 panel and other affected patients will receive letters identifying their new Primary Care Managers and panels soon.

People previously assigned to Lt. Col. (Dr.) Willis Damschroeder, 2nd Lt. Esther Carson, 2nd Lt. Joseph Cofer, Capt. Laurence Brown or Capt. Carol Gilchrist, may have been re-assigned to another provider or their care may be with a different panel.

Along with changing the panel structure, the Medical Group is working on solving problems with the medical appointment line.

"We have revamped our entire phone-line system and the problems our patients have been experiencing should be eliminated by early to mid-February," Hansen added.

For more information about panels or providers, or to change providers, call 228-1585 or 228-2856.

Air Force releases some specialties from Stop-Loss

By Master Sgt. Rick Burnham
Air Force Print News

Air Force personnel officials have developed a plan that will mean the end of Stop-Loss restrictions on a number of career fields as early as March. The Stop-Loss "exit plan" includes 24 officer and 40 enlisted career fields, and is based on the strategies of Operations Enduring Freedom and Noble Eagle.

It is the result of a planned "90-day review," officials at the Pentagon said. An initial 30-day review, conducted in early November, resulted in the continuation of Stop-Loss restrictions on all Air Force specialties. Stop-Loss measures were instituted by the Air Force on Oct. 2 to ensure personnel levels were adequate to prosecute the war. Subsequent reviews will take place at 60-day intervals.

The officer career fields released from Stop-Loss restrictions include: 13S, 21A, 21M, 21S, 35B, 36P, 38M, 42B, 42E, 43A, 43D, 43M, 44D, 44H, 44J, 44Z, 46G, 47B, 47D, 48E, 65A, 65F, 65W and 84H.

Enlisted career fields released from Stop-Loss restrictions include: 1C6XX, 1S0XX, 1T0X1, 2A000, 2A0X1, 2A1X1, 2A1X2, 2A1X3, 2A300, 2A3X1, 2A3X2, 2A3X3, 2A4X1, 2A4X2, 2A5X3, 2A6X3, 2A7X4, 2M0XX, 2P0XX, 2R0XX, 2R1XX, 2T3X5, 2T3X7, 2W0XX, 2W1XX, 2W2XX, 3A0XX, 3C0X2, 3C3X1, 3H0XX, 3N0XX, 3N1XX, 3N2XX, 3U0XX, 4J0XX, 6FXXX, 8FXXX, 8MXXX, 9DXXX and 9E000.

A number of different factors went into the process of deciding which career fields could be released, officials said.

"We had to consider the balance between the active duty and the Air Reserve Component, as well as the need to remain flexible to changing events worldwide," said Lt. Col. Jan Middleton, chief of promotion, evaluation and separation policy at the Pentagon. "In addition, Homeland Defense is still being shaped and defined. So, there were a lot of factors to consider."

The plan gives the Air Force an effective and reasonable approach to easing Stop-Loss restrictions, Middleton said.

"This plan gives the Air Force an easily executable strategy," she said. "The actual 'termination' of Stop-Loss is still to be determined — we still need to retain those personnel directly needed to support the war."

More career fields will likely be released in the future based on input from different levels around the Air Force, she said.

Those people with retirement or separation dates already established in the personnel system will be allowed to retire or separate beginning in March, following an established "admin period" during February.

People who are deployed in support of operations Noble Eagle or Enduring Freedom or related operations, and Reserve and Guard component people who are involuntarily on active duty (partial mobilization) or voluntarily on active duty in support of operations Noble Eagle or Enduring Freedom or related operations, will not be released until they return from deployment or are demobilized.

Officials at the Air Force Personnel Center at Randolph Air Force Base, Texas, will provide each active-duty military personnel flight with a list of those people to get the actions started.

Air National Guard and Reserve people should contact their respective military personnel flights to begin release procedures.

Each squadron commander will be responsible for approving the actual release date.

More information regarding the Stop-Loss exit plan is available at installation MPFs.

Home is where the Air Force sends you

By Lt. Col. Mike Archuleta
355th Service Squadron commander

Eighteen years and nine months ago, I showed up to the Medina Annex of Lackland Air Force Base to attend Officer Training School. I had it all worked out: become an officer, get four years valuable experience then trade in my blues for civilian attire and the big bucks.

Three months later, I put on my first set of gold bars and guess what...I was an Air Force officer, not a civilian counting down his four years. From that day forward, I was committed to be a part of the world's largest and best all-volunteer Air Force.

In the 18 and one-half years since, I haven't regretted my decision to stay in beyond 4 years.

I'll be the first to admit that last May, I nearly dropped my paperwork for retirement (I also have one year enlisted time that would've counted toward 20). I figured that 20 years of service would be a good time to exit. But when the reality of retirement hit me, I realized I had some unfinished business. I realized that instead of me being in the Air Force, the Air Force was in me.

Looking back, I can honestly say that I've never had a bad assignment or a bad job. Many would find that hard to believe when you realize that along with choice locations like Sacramento, Calif., Cocoa Beach, Fla., Hampton, Va. and Tucson, Ariz., I've also had assignments in South Korea, Dayton, Ohio, Montgomery, Ala. and at the Pentagon.

Ever seen the sign that reads "Home is where the Air Force sends you"? It's true. No matter where I'm assigned, I run into people I've met at previous assignments.

I meet new friends in the military and from the local community. I experience new cultures and see things that many people only read about or see on the Discovery Channel. I've had a chance to try new activities that I never would have tried. And the best part is that I've gotten to do all

"I realized that instead of me being in the Air Force, the Air Force was in me."

Over the past 18 and one-half years, I've learned that the Air Force is not a corporation, it's not a club, it's not a fraternity and it's not a business...it's a calling. Every time I see our flag, hear our National Anthem or see someone salute, I realize how proud I am to be a member of the elite 0.5 percent of our nation's population that chose to join the most honorable profession in our society. The profession that on a moment's notice, stands up to defend the Constitution "against all enemies" and ensures the remaining 99.5 percent of the population is able to make their own choices and give their own opinions.

Although we pay a significant price through all the personal and family sacrifices we make during our careers, the rewards we gain from this noble profession are even greater. If you wonder what I mean by my last sentence, think about how you felt to be an Air Force professional Sept. 11.

From sensor to shooter

The goal is to cut targeting cycle to 10 minutes or less

By John Correll
Air Force Magazine

Sometimes the targeting of airpower can be swift and uncomplicated. Recent operations in Afghanistan provided an example.

Taliban troops and tanks had massed on a ridge within view of a US forward air controller, who scanned the position with a laser range finder and relayed the coordinates to the theater command center. The target was passed to a B-52, flying unseen above the clouds. Guiding on a signal from space, the B-52 struck with deadly precision. Time elapsed: 19 minutes.

Several things made the quick reaction possible. The target was clear and visible. The FAC was close enough to make positive identification. The ridge was in a location where the FAC was authorized to release a strike on certain kinds of targets, such as tanks.

For various reasons-some technical, some procedural, some political-most targeting of airpower takes much longer than 19 minutes.

In the Kosovo operation three years ago, the representatives of more than a dozen nations got to vote on what to bomb. The approval of fixed targets took, incredibly, an average of 14 days.

The constraints are seldom that severe, although The New Yorker and the Washington Post have reported delays in the approval of targets in Afghanistan that may have let some Taliban and al Qaeda leaders escape.

Avoidance of civilian casualties is important. Mistakes can kill the wrong people. They can also undercut the objectives for which the war is being fought.

It is not easy to balance such considerations against military requirements.

The crux of the matter is how soon we can absorb and act on data from intelligence, surveillance, and reconnaissance sources. When the data is ambiguous, it stretches out the targeting decision.

Part of the solution is more capable sensors.

The Air Force believes the targeting loop can be shortened substantially. This is a high priority for Gen. John Jumper, who became Air Force Chief of Staff last September. He has been pushing the idea for his last three assignments.

Jumper says that the "kill chain"-the time from when the target is spotted by a sensor until a shooter locks on to it-can be reduced to 10 minutes or less.

He prescribes the "horizontal integration" of aircraft and spacecraft, which would exchange data with each other.

The place where it all comes together is the Combined Air Operations Center, which Jumper says the Air Force "will consider as a weapon system and crew it like we crew an airplane."

The automated CAOC of the future will combine information from satellites and manned and unmanned aircraft with everything that's in any database.

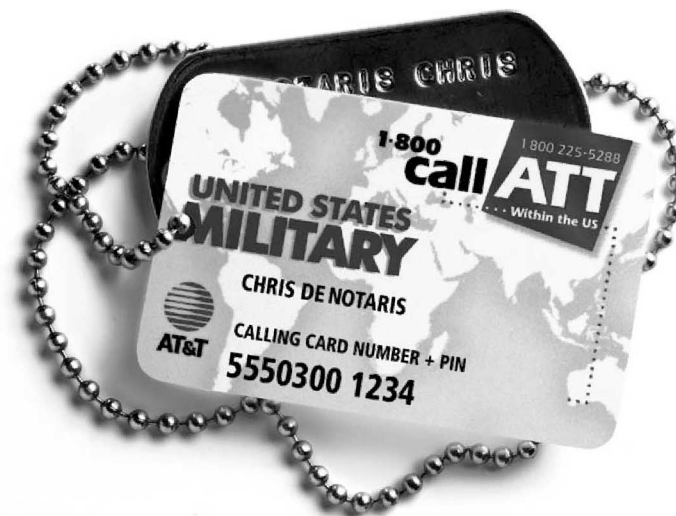

The CAOC will obtain and display, without being asked, information about targets and the battle area.

Reducing the targeting cycle is not a new idea, nor is the fusion of intelligence data. The difference this time is the degree of data integration that technology now makes possible and the amount of horsepower behind the effort.

The value of rapid targeting is obvious at the tactical level of war. If the process is slow, time-urgent opportunities may be lost.

There is no time for the enemy to react, adjust, adapt, mount a counteroffensive, or escape. The faster the attack, the more effective it will be and the sooner the conflict will likely be concluded and over.

Tightening the sensor-to-shooter loop is long overdue, and the effort to do it has an excellent chance to succeed.

Food service employees help keep D-M flying

Story and photos by
Tech. Sgt. B. Coors-Davidson
355th Wing Public Affairs

Excellence in all we do... it's not just a phrase, it's a way of life for more than 100 unique individuals who keep D-M's food services running and it's people well fed.

The Centers for Habilitation, D-M's contractor for manning the Desert Inn Dining Facility and Roadrunner Flight Kitchen's operations, not only keep these facilities operating efficiently, they also provide a valuable service to the Tucson community. More than 85 percent of their employees are adults with disabilities.

This accomplishment played a part in the Air Force receiving the Secretary of Defense Trophy of achievement for employing people with disabilities for 2001. The 355th Services Squadron is also D-M's largest employer of people with disabilities.

The TCH employees serve more than 25,000 meals each month and operate all aspects of the food service facilities with responsibility over everything from food preparation to building and grounds maintenance.

"I'm extremely proud of our TCH employees. We receive countless comment cards that praise not only the quality of the food, but also their customer service," said Lt. Col. Mike Archuleta, 355th Services Squadron commander. "Our TCH staff is responsive, professional and dedicated. You couldn't ask for a finer group of people."

Most customers to D-M's food service facilities don't even know that most of the civilian employees are handicapped. What is noticeable is their desire to provide the best service possible. While these people are a vital part of the Air Force mission, the Air Force also provides a vital service to them.

"Some of our people live with family members, some in group homes and some even live independently," said Yvette Smith, TCH Project manager. "This partnership between D-M and TCH helps our people become productive, successful adults, and also become a contributing member of the community."

One example of this partnership is Ricky Lay, an intense young man who prefers not to take breaks during the day, but instead moves from one duty to the next with efficiency and determination, showing what attention to detail is all about. "He was very shy and sheltered when he started here about three years ago," Smith said. "Now he can work almost every position in both facilities."

All D-M's TCH members proved their dedication Sept. 11.

Listed as essential personnel, they worked 18-hour shifts, and many continued to work even after their shifts ended, allowing the dining facility to operate without closing all night.

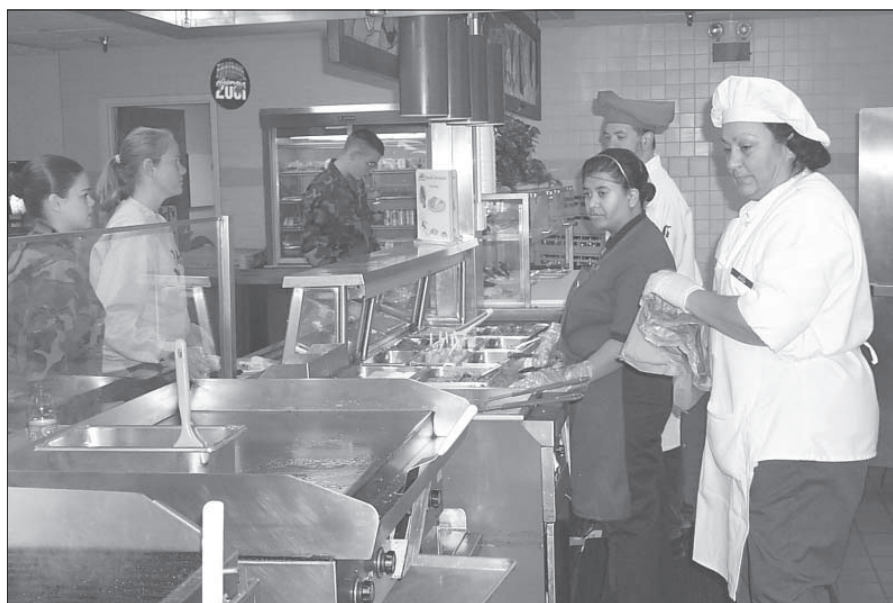

"I applaud the achievements of the Air Force for having such effective programs to employ people with disabilities," said David S.C. Chu, The Undersecretary of Defense for Personnel and Readiness.

Top: David Lizarraga loads dishes into the "clipper." He has worked for The Centers for Habilitation at the Desert Inn as a mess attendant since 1993.

Center: Ricky Lay works the stockroom at the Desert Inn. He also works at the Roadrunner Flight Kitchen and has mastered most positions at both facilities while working for TCH at D-M for almost three years.

Love and marriage

A woman awakes during the night to find her husband was not in bed. She puts on her robe and goes downstairs to look for him. She finds him sitting at the kitchen table. He appears to be in deep thought, just staring at the wall. She watches as he wiped a tear from his eye and takes a sip of his coffee. "What's the matter, dear?", she whispers as she steps into the room, "Why are you down here at this time of night?"

The husband looks up from his coffee, "Do you remember 20 years ago when we were dating, and you were only 16?" he asks solemnly.

"Yes I do" she replies.

"Do you remember when your father caught us in the back seat of my car making out?"

"Yes, I remember," said the wife. The husband continued, "Do you remember when he shoved the shotgun in my face and said, 'Either you marry my daughter, or I'll send you to jail for 20 years?'" "I remember that too," she replied softly.

He wiped a tear from his cheek and said, "I would have gotten out today."

Chef packs a punch

By 1st Lt. Chrissy Cuttita
355th Wing Public Affairs

When Senior Airman Steven Martinez "packs a lunch" at the 355th Services Squadron Roadrunner Flight Kitchen, it carries a little different meaning for those who know him.

Martinez, a chef and quality inspector for SVS, also "packs a punch," and is one of a handful of boxers chosen to compete at the 27th Air Force Box-Off.

In January, Martinez headed to the Bennet Sports and Fitness Center at Kelly Field Annex, San Antonio, to compete for a spot to represent the Air Force at the Armed Forces Boxing Championships in February, something the boxing team has not won since 1975.

Although Martinez didn't make the final cut, he is hopeful for next year. This was the first year he applied ... last year his former unit couldn't release him to attend.

His resume, however, is his application. He has been training for five years, fought the last two, and has always loved the sport.

With a record of 8 wins and 1 loss, Martinez is confident he'll continue his boxing success.

"Grandpa would always take me to the Olympic Auditorium in LA to watch fights and I fell in love with the sport," said Martinez who claims his inspiration to box has grown with the passing of his beloved grandfather six years ago.

At work, Martinez said, "Like Steven Siegal, I am just a chef."

This Roadrunner flight kitchen troop said "because nutrition and exercise go hand in hand, this job is perfect for me."

Martinez came to D-M in May 2001 just after his job of "personal chef" for the missile team at Malmstrom AFB, Montana.

From high school wrestling to semi-pro football, this "jock" said, "If it's competitive, I am out there trying."

Outside the ring, he takes his talents to the community, offering mentorship and training to youth in a local gym in hopes that he inspires them to stay away from the gangs and drugs he saw growing up in Los Angeles.

In fact, getting away from that harsh environment was a good reason for him to join the Air Force.

On base, Martinez is working with others to propose boxing training classes at the new fitness facility opening this spring, including a portable ring and all new equipment.

To become a professional boxer it takes a check and application to be a USA Boxing amateur. Then the boxer's trainer/coach will coordinate the fight schedule.

In Montana, Martinez won the state championship.

Five years down the road Martinez hopes he will have completed a degree in sports medicine. Once he earns a bachelors degree, he may apply for an Air Force commission.

Friday and Sunday Ocean's Eleven (PG-13) 1 hour, 57 minutes

Danny Ocean, played by George Clooney, is a man of action. Less than 24 hours after his parole from prison he is already rolling out his next plan. Following three rules — don't hurt anybody, don't steal from anyone who doesn't deserve it, and play the game like you've got nothing to lose — Danny orchestrates the most sophisticated, elaborate casino heist in history.

Saturday Vanilla Sky (R) 2 hours, 25 minutes

David Aames, played by Tom Cruise, appears to lead a charmed life. Handsome, wealthy and charismatic, the young New York City publishing executive's freewheeling existence is enchanting. Thrust unexpectedly onto a roller-coaster ride, David finds himself on a mind-bending search for his soul and discovers true love.

Aerospace & Arizona Days 2002

Davis-Monthan AFB • April 27 - 28, 2002

"Service For Freedom"

D-M officials expect thousands of eyes to look to the Tucson skies April 27-28 for Aerospace & Arizona Days 2002.

The two-day airshow will feature numerous military and civilian aerial demonstrations and one of the largest displays of static aircraft from across the United States. This year's feature demonstration will be a Combat Search and Rescue pickup accomplished by our very own A/OA-10 aircraft and the 305th Rescue Squadron rescue helicopters. Several demonstration aircraft from the Air Force, Navy, Army, and Marines are expected.

Official Air Show Program

As a business owner, you can show your support and reach out to a very large captive audience by placing your ad in the official air show program.

This special edition will be inserted into the Desert Airman, official base newspaper for Davis-Monthan AFB. It will also be available in high traffic locations in Tucson prior to the show, and passed out to the public attending the two-day event.
